

Margaret Flynn Mahaffey is a partner at Walsworth and leads the firm's asbestos practice group. Her practice primarily focuses on environmental litigation with an emphasis on product liability, premises liability and toxic tort. Margaret's experience includes multiple party litigation involving exposure to asbestos and other toxins. She has successfully represented a broad spectrum of clients involved in the construction industry, as well as product manufacturers and suppliers, property owners and operators, and both large and small businesses. In addition to overseeing the national coordination of several clients, Margaret personally handles a large docket of active matters.

Margaret's 20+ years of experience with toxic litigation has allowed her to develop strong working relationships with both opposing counsel and the courts to the benefit of her clients. She is able to offer her clients unique insight and strategies for resolution of individual claims as well as large docket management with excellent results. Margaret has settled thousands of claims in a cost effective and timely manner and seen repeated success on dispositive motions and trial strategy.
