

Ethan Flinders is an accomplished litigator focused on the defense of general and premises liability, environmental, and real estate litigation. He handles all aspects of pre-trial litigation including initial evaluation and pleadings, discovery, depositions, and law and motion.

Ethan comes to Walsworth with experience in matters involving general and premises liability, product liability, and toxic tort litigation. Ethan also has experience defending catastrophic injury claims. At his prior employment, Ethan developed litigation strategy, investigated and interviewed clients and third-party witnesses, propounded and responded to discovery, argued various motions, and attended court hearings and mediations.

REPRESENTATIVE SUCCESSES

- Auto v. Auto – _____
- Auto v. Auto – Obtained a favorable settlement after an above policy limits demand in a personal injury matter where the plaintiffs were severely injured after they were rear-ended while driving a motorcycle. At mediation, it was shown that the claimant had the same spinal surgical recommendation well before the disputed motor vehicle accident. The claimant claimed the collision caused extensive neck and back injuries, including protruding cervical and lumbar disc, and alleged he would need spinal surgery as a result of the accident. After collecting the underinsured motorist's insurance policy limit, the claimant made a claim for his automobile insurance policy limits.
- Successfully resolved personal injury matter for a nominal amount after filing a motion for summary judgment that demonstrated there was no dangerous condition. Plaintiff tripped and fell on an alleged crack outside a major retail store. Plaintiff sued for bodily injury and lost wages – damages allegedly worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. The client big box store used its expert to demonstrate that the alleged crack was in fact a seam between two concrete slabs, and not a dangerous condition.
- Obtained voluntary dismissal in an asbestos matter where the plaintiff alleged he contracted mesothelioma after using a manufacturer's automotive products. The manufacturer filed a motion for summary judgment arguing that the plaintiff could not have used its products as there was no supplier or distributor of the product located near the plaintiff's residence or work.
- Obtained a settlement for a nominal amount in a personal injury action filed against a big box store where the plaintiff sustained extensive injuries after falling off of his bicycle. Following discovery, the big box store was able to prove that plaintiff made aftermarket alterations, including lowering the position of the front wheel, to the bike after it was purchased, which likely led to the plaintiff's fall from the bike.
